

NAI MULLANE-RONAKI
Nō Tapuika, Waitaha, Ngāti Pikiao

HEALTH POLICY ANALYST

KAITOHUTOHU KAUPAPA
HERE HAUORA

Health Policy Analysts evaluate current and potential policies regarding health and health care in their community or organisation. They gather and analyse information to assist in the planning, development, interpretation and review of government or industrial policies.

Kia Ora Hauora
Supporting Māori into Health

WHAT IS A HEALTH POLICY ANALYST?

Health Policy analysts evaluate current and potential policies regarding health and health care in their community or organisation. They gather and analyse information to assist in the planning, development, interpretation and review of government or industrial policies. Their primary objectives are to understand how current health policies affect communities and the potential outcomes of future policies.

WHERE DO HEALTH POLICY ANALYST WORK?

- District Health Boards (public health services)
- Governmental Agencies (Ministry of Health)
- Non-governmental organisations (NGOs)

WHAT TRAINING IS INVOLVED?

To be a Health Policy Analysts you must gain a bachelor's degree in a relevant area of policy. This may include Health, Public Policy, Social Science, Laws, Politics, Resource Management or Statistics. Many employers will often prefer candidates to have a postgraduate qualification as well.

WHAT CLASSES SHOULD I TAKE NOW?

- English
- Social Science
- Te Reo Māori
- Health
- Statistics
- Economics
- Geography

